JOSEPHINE TRIGG PIGOTT HOUSE

SUMMARY: One of three surviving Gothic Revival residences in Boonville, the one-and-one-half story Josephine Trigg Pigott House, 1307 Sixth Street, is constructed of brick laid in a common bond variant of seven stretcher rows per header row on a T-shaped plan. Its gable roofs are sheathed with composition shingles and distinguished by returns and centered cross gable. The Josephine Trigg Pigott house is virtually identical to the Juliet Trigg Johnson House, 1304 Main Street, although their floor plans are reversed. Both were built circa 1857-1860 by Dr. William H. Trigg as wedding gifts for his daughters and employ the same Gothic Revival style and many of the same details. The Pigott House has endured fewer alterations than the Johnson House and retains most of the essential features and elements which characterized its initial construction. Despite minor alterations, the Josephine Trigg Pigott House retains sufficient physical characteristics to convey integrity of workmanship, design, and materials, in addition to its integrity of location and setting.

ELABORATION: The facade, or east elevation, of the Pigott House is dominated by a centered cross gable which is typical of the Gothic Revival style. The double leaves of one-over-one casement windows with double arched rowlock lintel occupy the upper story's single central bay. The roofline entablature with bracketed overhang, which suggests the contemporary Italianate style, is continued along the cross gable eaves. Similar bracketing appears on the Juliet Trigg Johnson House. The first floor is divided into five symmetrically arranged bays. The central bay is occupied by double doors with transom, arranged in an outer pair of storm doors, an entrance vestibule, and a second, interior pair of doors. The bay is framed by a pedimented, dentiled surround which suggests Greek Revival rather than Gothic Revival detailing. The remaining four bays contain two-over-two, double hung sash surmounted by raised, arched brick lintels arranged in alternating soldier and rowlock bands. All windows on the facade are shuttered. Two corbelled brick chimneys pierce the roof ridge, rising on either side of a central hall.

The returns and bracketed entablature are continued on the north elevation's gable end. A single, two-over-two, double hung window capped with an arched rowlock lintel is centered in the upper story gable. The first story's two symmetrical bays are occupied by windows identical to those on the facade. The rear gable extension is divided into three symmetrically arranged bays. A one story wooden bay on a brick foundation projects from the easternmost bay. Each planar surface holds a four-over-four, double hung window. The bracketed eaves and entablature are repeated on the bay and arched window headers are duplicated in wood. At the basement level, the bay projection is flanked by windows with arched rowlock lintels. The central bay was originally occupied by a door but presently houses a double leafed, eight paned casement window. A flat roofed porch with plain entablature, wood ornamentation, paired posts, and balustrade originally sheltered the facade entry but was relocated to this bay at an unknown date. The final bay contains a four-over-four, double hung sash and an arched brick lintel identical to those on the facade. A gabled, wooden dormer with bracketed entablature and pediment is centered on the roof of the extension's north elevation. The top sash of its two-over-two, double hung sash is arched.

A shed roofed brick garage with a cast concrete foundation was attached circa 1920 to the rear, or west, elevation of the gable extension. The garage is flanked by the predominant two-over-two, double hung window with arched brick lintels. A door with arched header is centered in the north elevation of the garage. In the west elevation, a six-over-six, double hung window with partially concealed arched lintel is set to the south of the elevation's center. Double, side hinged garage doors with a flat lintel are the only features in the south elevation. Two symmetrically placed two-over-two, double hung sash are located above the garage in the gable end.

Another one story, wooden bay with a brick foundation projects from the gable end of the south elevation. Fenestration is two-over-two, double hung sash with arched upper sash. The bracketed entablature is again present. A single window identical to those below with a brick rowlock header is centered in the upper story of the gable. The south elevation of the gable extension is divided into three asymmetrically arranged bays. A porch shelters the two easternmost bays. The flat roof which originally covered the porch remains beneath a shed roof which extends in a broken slope from the extension's roof edge. The porch, however, retains its bracketed roofline entablature and is supported by chamfered posts set on brick piers on the concrete porch slab. The central bay contains a door with arched lintel, while the easternmost bay contains a floor length, four-over-four, double hung sash, also with arched lintel. The unsheltered bay contains the two-over-two sash predominantly used on the house. A dormer identical to and opposite the dormer on the north slope of the gable extension's roof is located on the south slope. Two corbelled brick chimneys pierce the roof just below the ridge.

The interior of the Pigott House is virtually unaltered. A bathroom was added at the north end of the rear hall at an unknown date and the kitchen modernized. Interior trim, ceiling height, and hardware are original.

SUMMARY: The Josephine Trigg Pigott House, 119 West Morgan Street, is significant under Criterion C in the area of ARCHITECTURE. One of three surviving Gothic Revival residences in Boonville, two of which are brick and are located outside of historic districts, the Josephine Trigg Pigott House retains the distinctive details and features of the style, which was never prolific in Boonville (see "Historic Resources of Boonville: The Steamboat Era, 1826-1870" and "Historic Resources of Boonville: Additional Architectural Contexts--Gothic Revival Residences"). Steep roofs, centered cross gables, and decorative wood ornamentation characterized the Gothic Revival style, and the Pigott House shares these characteristics with the remaining examples of the style in Boonville.

ELABORATION: The Josephine Trigg Pigott House was constructed circa 1857-1860 by Dr. William H. Trigg, a Boonville financier and merchant, as a wedding gift for his daughter. A house identical in scale and style, but with reversed floor plan, was constructed for a second daughter, Juliet, at 1304 Main Street, also as a wedding gift. Both the Josephine Trigg Pigott House and the Juliet Trigg Johnson House are the earliest examples of Gothic Revival residential architecture in Boonville. The Pigotts occupied the house only until 1867. Although a number of owners followed, the house has remained a single family dwelling.

Verbal Boundary Description The property lies within an undesignated lot adjacent Lot #5, Wendleton's Addition, in the city of Boonville, Missouri. The lot is the same size and shape as the Juliet Trigg Johnson House (0-36) lot, to the east and is described as follows. Beginning at the lot's northwest corner, a common point between 0-36 (its northeast corner) and 0-38 (the Josephine Trigg Pigott House), then east 165' to 6th Street; then south along 6th Street 100'; then west 165' to the southwest corner (southeast corner of 0-36);

☒ See continuation sheet

Boundary Justification

The boundary encompasses the single parcel of land that is occupied by the property and its immediate surroundings. The legally recorded boundary lines that have been historically associated with the property retain integrity and form the limits of the boundary.
